Topic: Assessing Peer Education in Student Affairs

Peer education programs are invaluable to student growth and development and subsequently, the field of student affairs. Such programs are often complex in structure and administration across student affairs units. In this presentation, we will consider the key factors that contribute to a successful peer education programs, and discuss how to assess effectiveness of these programs on our own campuses. Join us for a review of the literature and a discussion of best practices for assessing peer education programs in student affairs.

Presenters: University of Colorado Boulder
- Crystal Cyr, Student Affairs Assessment Specialist
- Kimberly Kruchen, Manager of Student Affairs Assessment and Planning

Topic: Peer-to-Peer Coaching-Creating a Culture of Assessment

Interested in fostering a culture of student learning assessment? Peer-to-peer coaching might be the answer. Red Rocks Community College’s Student Learning Assessment Council will share their experiences and lessons learned about meeting faculty where they are in the assessment process. Interactive presentation.

Presenters: Red Rocks Community College
- Chelsea Campbell, Faculty Lead Water Quality Management Technology
- Carmen Stephens, Nursing Program Director
- Nicole Lacroix, Dean of Instruction
- Jenning Prevatte, Faculty Lead Teacher Education and Early Childhood Education
- Kyle Whitecotton, Faculty-English

Topic: General Education Assessment-Making Assessment Valuable and Sustainable

Our interactive session will begin with a brief narrative of the “Compass” General education curriculum at UCCS including its creation and approval by the faculty and ongoing assessment efforts in key areas of the curriculum (inclusiveness, sustainability, and oral communication) and end with a structured opportunity for networking and brainstorming.

Topics will include a) assessing general education and other campus initiatives, b) making assessment valuable by identifying exigent issues concerning faculty and connecting assessment results to meaningful next steps and c) building a streamlined and sustainable system for collecting and scoring artifacts that can continue in the case of faculty and administrative turnover.

Presenter: University of Colorado Colorado Springs
- Phillip Heasley, Senior Instructor, Assessment Coordinator for the Compass General Education Curriculum
Topic: The Manifest and Latent Functions of the Office of Academic Assessment on a University/College Campus

No matter the size of a university or college, an Assessment Offices exist for primary purpose—to systematically collect, analyze, and interpret institutional data on teaching and learning, educational programs, administrative, co-curricular activities, and use the information to improve learning process, policy formation, support services, co-curricular programs, and decision-making. While the overarching goal of assessment remains the same, the functions of the Office of Assessment continue to increase in response to a broad range of educational trends, challenges, and mandated accountability requirements from higher education stakeholders.

The purpose of this presentation is to expose those who are new to the field of assessment, especially those who operate a "one person-shop" to have a better picture of the multitude of functions that assessment entails. With this caveat in mind, the presentation will identify some of the manifest (intended) and the latent (unintended) functions of the Office of Assessment in a university or college campus. Attendees, especially those who are new to the field of assessment, and those who operate a "one-person" office of assessment will go back to their respective campuses with a better understanding of the paradigm shift in the functions of the Office of Assessment in the context of the two dichotomies couched in this presentation.

Presenter: Adams State University
- Dr. Bob Adebayo, Director of Assessment

Topic: Part 1 of 2 | Learning Outcomes to Curriculum Mapping-Outside the Classroom Student Services Assessment

From conceptual framework to implementation, we will discuss the early stages of the assessment cycle and how they can be utilized in your area(s) of campus. We will be focusing specifically on the benefits of learning outcomes and curriculum mapping during this session. Part 2 of this topic will be offered in the afternoon.

Presenters: University of Northern Colorado
- Erin Datteri-Saboski, Director of New Student Orientation
- Paige Johnsen, Assistant Director of New Student Orientation
Topic: Assessing High Impact Educational Practices in Student Services
If you’ve ever wondered how much co-curricular activities, instructional support services, and student employment opportunities contribute to student learning, this session is for you! Through a number of examples (e.g. first year experiences, multicultural events, community-based projects), presenters will illustrate how non-academic departments have used outcomes-based assessment to quantify student learning and continuously improve the quality of their services and programs.

Presenters: Pikes Peak Community College
- Patricia Diawara is the Executive Director of Institutional Effectiveness
- Lincoln Wulf is the Director of Academic Advising and Testing

Topic: Buffet of Options for Classroom Embedded Assessment
For 10 years the PCC Hospitality Studies program has used a Sunday brunch buffet to assess students’ professionalism and use of industry technology through observation and reflection. We will talk about the development and challenges associated with such and assessment.

Presenter: Pueblo Community College
- John Jakeman, Hospitality Studies Faculty

Topic: Part 2 of 2 | Assess, Analyze, Review, Repeat: Outside the Classroom Student Services Assessment
Now that you’ve created your outcomes, how do you assess them? This session will discuss the later stages of the assessment cycle and how they can be utilized in your area(s) of campus. We will be focusing specifically on the benefits and challenges of assessing, analyzing, and reviewing. This is Part 2 of Learning Outcomes to Curriculum Mapping-Outside the Classroom Student Services Assessment.

Presenters: University of Northern Colorado
- Erin Datteri-Saboski, Director of New Student Orientation
- Paige Johnsen, Assistant Director of New Student Orientation
Topic: Student Success and Retention—How Western Colorado University has embraced the complexities and promises of a thriving student body

In this session, Dr. Melanie Hulbert will lead participants through an in-depth discussion of the definitions and meanings behind student success in all its many forms. She will ask participants to think about and discuss how they would define and assess student success at their own institutions and why it matters. Finally, she will explain a retention initiative that she has led at her own institution and what early assessments are revealing about student perceptions of retention, success, and what it means to thrive. She will conclude with a discussion on the need for robust, diverse, and analytic measures needed to move students towards successful and on time graduation.

Presenter: Western Colorado University
• Dr. Melanie Hulbert currently serves as an Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs
